AN ILLUSTRATED GUIDE TO THE 5 STAGES OF TEETHING

CARTOONIZED!
So it doesn't seem so awful.

STAGE 1 (0-6 months)

MILK TEETH

Apparently even Nature winces at the thought of a mouth full of teeth latched onto a woman's nipple, so a baby's set of 20 teeth begin below the rubbery padding of their little pink gums.

STAGE 2 (6-10 months)

RABID CHIPMUNK

The first teeth begin erupting (as dentists accurately put it) through the gums. The lower and upper, central and lateral incisors (chipmunk teeth for us non-dentists). At this point, you'll start seriously doubting the wisdom of Nature.

STAGE 3 (10-14 months)

HOLY MOLARS!

Proper feeding and sleeping may now seem like a distant memory. Many will have spent countless hours and money online, in the search for anti-misery remedies for their baby and for themselves.

STAGE 4 (1-2 years)

FANGS

They're called canine teeth, but vampires are much more fashionable than dogs. Don't get your hopes up, though. They're not going to descend like supernatural fangs, they're going to take forever and a day like the others.

STAGE 5 (2-3 years)

REVENGE OF THE MOLARS

Twice the size of the other teeth, here come the big ones! Most parents laugh kind of crazily when you mention molars coming in. However, the few who had no trouble don't tend to live as long, due to being murdered by other parents.
