Hidden Delights – By Julia Wilson

I am on the search for goodness, joy and kindness.

I never thought that Covid 19 could bring any comfort.
So many thousands have died, lost their jobs and become impoverished because of the pandemic.
The statistics are horrifying.

I started a journal, way back in March, to record any event that seemed to brighten my day.
Now we are in the middle of June and I have over 60 entries, which is truly amazing.
Hundreds of volunteers are busy buying groceries for seniors.
Complete strangers, walking in our area, are happy to stop for brief conversations.
I find this very encouraging for the future. If we could only get to know our neighbours and help each other along the way then surely the world would become a better, safer and more humane place.

One of the pleasures of the pandemic has been the gift of extra time.
Time to talk longer on the phone with friends,
getting to know each other better.
Time to think about what is truly important in life.
How precious are our family and friends to us.
Time to visualize what we really need and want for ourselves and others every day.

Little things have taken on new meaning. My hairdresser arranged for me to have a haircut after hours. This was simply because I am a regular customer. It felt amazing after 12 weeks of looking like a shaggy dog.

Above all, we need to remember this curious and inconvenient time.
It is a small, but vital, part of our life.
